HISTORY

The city history has deep roots and it has been known since 1571. From the Bakhmut Storozha of the times of Ivan the Terrible when the fortress was built to protect the southern borders, to the leading industrial center of the modern Donbas Bakhmut has made a 447-year long journey. At various times, free entrepreneurs discovered here incalculable treasures the city is rich in: the world's largest deposits of salt, coal, refractory clay, sand, gypsum ... And business started here. Since the abolition of serfdom, rapid industrial development and the influx of foreign investment have begun in Bakhmut. A salt plant, Franco-Belgian-German investments in salt mines, glass, nail-bone, alabaster and brick factories ... Since then, the city has become a major trading center, and on November 25, 1920, it has become the center of the Donetsk province. In 1923, there were 12 industrial enterprises in the city: the "Victory of Labor" factory (now the VISTEC Machine-Building Plant), glass, alabaster, ceramic-tiling, three iron-casting, mechanical and ore-repairing factories, and a shoe factory. In the early 1950s, the first Ukrainian non-ferrous metal processing plant was built on the northern outskirts of the city. In 1954, the first production was produced by the well-known manufacturer of sparkling wines "ARTWAYNERI", known far beyond Ukraine. In 1924, the historical Bakhmut was renamed into Artemivsk. In September 2015, the city returned its historical name Bakhmut. Modern Bakhmut is one of the leading cities of the Donetsk region with a developed industrial complex, the oldest city in the Donbas area, the cultural and historical center of the Donetsk region.
